Our Showing of Dress Materials is Larger Than Ever

So extensive was the variety of weaves and patterns offered to us this season by the mills, that we found it necessary to buy larger stocks than ever in order to present representative assortments to our customers.

We secured these fabrics at most advantageous prices and we have marked them proportionately. However, we cannot too emphatically urge upon our customers the necessity for early selection if these low prices are to be obtained.

All of the newest weaves, patterns and colors in wool dress goods are shown here at reasonable prices

Sketches of Little LOVE NEW YORK
by M. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—You can't stop that dramatic bunch known as the Washington Square Players when it gets going through history, mythology and the Dardanelles for a scenario.

Philip Moeller, who playwrights and typewrites all in one, has for years believed that Helen, the queen of Sparta, had never had fair dramatic treatment. So he took the afternoon train up the Hudson and spent a night in Troy and got a real line on Helen and several tins of local color.

Then he returned to his faithful typewriter, imagined himself on the Main street of Sparta and wrote "Helen's Husband." There are five characters: Helen herself, Taurus, her slave; Menelaus, the kink; Analytiko, the librarian, and that gay young blade, Paris.

Al Jennings used to be in the general bandit trade out Oklahoma way, specializing from time to time in bank and train holdups. Between Jennings and the penal statutes there is no unpaid installment. The books have been balance for a long time.

Jennings is now an evangelist and a missionary at large and is nightly telling the crowds in Brooklyn how he drew the empty shells from his revolver one day and said "never again." He looks like a shrewd countryman spruced up for the city.

While walking down Fifth avenue a well groomed man of middle age waved at him. Jennings recalled that it was a former occupant of a cell next to his. The man has reformed and now holds a responsible railroad position.

Franklin P. Adams has a contributor, the droll person, whose cigar lighter is too proud to light.

Norman Hapgood, the Harper Weekly editor, is sojourning in Washington gathering some items for his paper on national affairs. Mr. Hapgood was one of the first to fight for pure food and it seems that a waiter in one of the Washington hotels recognized him.

At breakfast the waiter asked: "Shall I serve the dish sir?"

"Yes you serve it."

"And how about the chemical analysis, sir? Shall I make it or will you, sir?"

Broadway expects soon to see Jordan L. Mott, III and his prima donna wife with whom he eloped in 1912.

Young Mott and his bride are now in Yokohama eling out a living by dance and song. The young man's grandfather has just bequeathed him a million.

When Mott fled from Broadway with the actress a chase began which has no equal in elopements. The pursuer was Hector Fuller, newspaper reporter and war correspondent, sometimes of Indianapolis and other times of Gotham.

Fuller was given a $10,000 expense account and promised a lump sum of $25,000 if he would bring Mott home. Fuller after a wild chase overhauled Mott at Hongkong, but it did no good. Mott said he had lost his love for gold and that he and his bride would "stick it out."

Jimmy Mathews and his five polite page boys from the Duke of York's theater, London, are in New York and to see them together looks like a section cut out of a cold London street. The five page boys live together in Fifty-first street.

They like New York, but they haven't found a bakeshop yet where they can buy pork pies and they haven't seen a muffinman even once.

Mathews is forming an American branch of the Savage Club, so Londoners will feel at home. As a starter the tea room in the Hippodrome has been engaged for 5 o'clock and even Mark Leuscher is drinking the stuff and liking it.
